UNDER AN OLD LAW.

Settlers to Be Prosecuted for Killing Bannock Indians.

The Indian Bureau has not yet sent any communications to the Department of Justice looking toward the punishment of the settlers of Jackson's Hole for the killing of the Bannock Indians. The apparent delay has been caused by the fact that no law was known under which the United States courts could take cognizance of the matter. It being recognized that it would not be possible to secure a conviction in the Wyoming State courts, on account of the feeling there against the Indians.

It was discovered to-day, however, that the treaty of July 3, 1868, between the United States and the Bannocks and Shoshones provides directly for such a case. A paragraph in it reads: "If any man among the whites, or among other people subjected to the authority of the United States, shall commit any wrong upon the persons or property of the Indians, the United States will, upon proof made to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs at Washington, proceed at once to arrest and punish the offender, and will then determine what additional security will be afforded the workmen employed on the building."

Steps will be taken as rapidly as possible to bring the guilty parties to justice.

BROUGHT HIM TO TERMS.

Post-office Contractor Thorp Will Inspect the Building.

Mr. J. F. Kinsey, superintendent of construction at the new city postoffice, has gained his point.

Mr. Thorp, one of the contractors, has signified his intention of looking into the matter of temporary flooring, and will reach the city on Monday to make a personal examination of the work, and will then determine what additional security will be afforded the workmen employed on the building.

Mr. Kinsey, in conversation with The Times reporter to-day, said that he thought his first letter to Messrs. Thorp & Bond had been misunderstood, and that they now thoroughly understood the case, and the danger incurred by the men at work upon the building, and would take immediate steps to remedy the danger.

As Mr. Thorp will look over the work on his arrival and give directions to his foreman as to what is necessary to be done to afford the security needed.

Accuses a Detective.

Attorney J. Altheus Johnson, in a letter to Maj. Moore, superintendent of police, charges Detective Harrigan with unjust discrimination in the matter of paying witnesses in the suit of the District against William O. Hart. The charge is that Harrigan made up a pay roll of the witnesses "who testified in a manner that was most pleasing" to the detective.

Warrants for Militiamen.

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of James F. Carr, James Dement and Charles Rardon for improperly holding Government property. The warrant was sworn out by W. H. Merhase, lieutenant of the Fifth Battalion, D. C. N. G. Carr and Dement were formerly members of Company A, of the battalion, and Rardon is now attached to the organization.

Garfield School Addition.

Bids were opened to-day at the District Building for the construction of an addition to the Garfield School, on Hamilton road, as provided for in the last appropriation bill. The firms presenting proposals, with the amount bid by each, were as follows: W. H. C. Thompson, $2,420; R. T. Humphrey, $1,680; C. R. Munroe, $1,566; Farnwell & Greer, $1,575; W. P. P. & Co., $1,768; J. M. Dunn, $2,155.

OTHER CITIES BID HIGH

Competition for the Republican Convention is Sharp.

FRIENDLY TO WASHINGTON

Members of the National Committee Favor This City—What Needs to Be Done to Secure the Honor—About $75,000 Will Knock the Plum, but Quick Work Is Needed.

The presence in this city to-day of Senator Carter, chairman of the Republican national executive committee, affords an excellent opportunity for calling the earnest attention of citizens to the fact that but a little more than four months will elapse before the committee will meet and select a place for holding the next national convention of the party.

There is little, if any, doubt that with a reasonable amount of energetic work, and the arrangement of a satisfactory guarantee fund, Washington could easily take the prize away from all competitors. The merchants and business men have at all times proven themselves models of generosity in the matter of encouraging the holding of large gatherings of every kind and character, in this city. Experience has proven that a convention having in attendance many thousands of people brings in a sufficient amount of outside money, which is distributed among the local tradesmen, to more than compensate for whatever may have been expended in the way of cash subscriptions for the actual expenses of the meeting. Washington is rapidly becoming the center for all national organizations. The Knights of Labor have located here and it is a safe prediction that within the next few years every society, association or organization having business before Congress or desiring to be within reach of easy and expeditious communication with members of that body will establish permanent headquarters in this city.

BENEFITS TO ACCRUE.

The League of Republican Clubs, through its executive committee, which held a meeting in Chicago last Wednesday, was delighted with the invitation to locate here, and would probably have taken a similar view of the advantages offered had not the invitation been extended. It would be entirely proper and of incalculable benefit to the Republican party, many of its members say, if the national headquarters could also be established in Washington, and then both committees would be in a position to work to each other's mutual interest and in perfect harmony.

Several members of the Republican national committee have been recently in this city, and express themselves as being friendly to Washington's candidacy for the convention, but at the same time they emphasize the warning that many larger cities will make high bids for the meeting, and that no time is to be lost if Washington desires to enter the race in earnest and with an equal chance of winning, as compared with the more populous and powerful cities. These members declare that there will be more than a half-score of the biggest cities in the United States actively in the race for the Republican national convention.

These cities already in the field and more or less actively working for the convention are as follows:

San Francisco, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Denver, Baltimore, Washington, Kansas City, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Omaha, Cincinnati, Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee, and, of course, Chicago.

The most active cities bidding for the convention are San Francisco, Buffalo, Denver and Pittsburgh. Those passively engaged in the fight are St. Louis, Philadelphia, New York, Omaha, Cleveland, Baltimore, Milwaukee, Washington, and Kansas City.

The Pacific coast metropolis is evidently holding out more inducements than any other candidate in the list. Buffalo has also been doing some very good missionary work in the interest of that town, a huge committee having been appointed some time ago to look after its interest, both in advance and at the time the Republican National Committee assembles in Washington.

DENVER IS ON HAND.

Denver entered the race at least three years ago. Considerable work has been done by the advocates of this city, but very little has been accomplished, so far as can be ascertained, up to the present time.

Ex-Senator Platt is understood to favor New York, but being a political politician, it makes very little difference to him where the convention is held, provided he has a voice in naming the candidates and that his views are considered, when the next national platform is being discussed. Philadelphia being a very "slow" town, is probably the least active of the big cities of the East looked upon as anxious to have the convention.

Cincinnati and Cleveland will probably be active candidates when the committee meets, but if either of the two are selected it will be considered a victory for Gov. McKinley as a presidential aspirant.

Milwaukee is also a passive candidate and Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis are only in the list hoping that if there is a fierce contest the prize may be captured as a rank outsider in a horse race sometimes does.

The Republican national committee is said to be in debt to the amount of about $75,000, and it must be admitted that this would be a considerable sum for the citizens of Washington to raise among themselves. As a matter of fact they would probably not be justified in such an expenditure for the sole purpose of having the convention held here.

But, taking into consideration all the benefits that would afterward accrue, especially if the work of encouragement was kept up in the way of having national headquarters located here, it will be readily seen that $75,000 could not be better expended.

District Suffrage Club.

The District Suffrage Club will hold its first meeting Saturday, August 24, at No. 621 First street northwest. The object of the club is to secure a State form of government for the District of Columbia.

Mr. Arthur E. Brown, editor of the Right of Suffrage, a monthly paper which will make its first appearance September 1, is the founder of the club.

FORESTRY EXHIBIT.

Instructive Display to Be Made at the Atlanta Exposition.

The forestry exhibit at the Atlanta Exposition promises to be the most complete and instructive ever made by the Government, excelling in excellence, though not in size, the exhibit at Chicago in 1893. The exhibits are now being shipped, and the work of installation will proceed as rapidly as they arrive at Atlanta.

It is the aim of Dr. B. E. Fernow, chief of the Department of Forestry, to make the exhibit typical of the splendid timber interests of the Southern States. It is Dr. Fernow's intention to remove the exhibit as far as possible from commercial aspects, with the intention of presenting an educational display.

The wide range in the use of wood in all phases of human life will be shown. Large panels are already hung on the pillars of the building, each representing one particular line of use; as, for instance, wood in the kitchen, wood in the laundry, in sports, in the game, in tools, etc. The lumber exhibit will be so complete that any one may trace the growth of the tree through various stages, learn its adaptability to various commercial uses, its value, durability, comparative worth for special uses, etc.

In this exhibit, which includes a complete statistical history of Southern forestry interests, Dr. Fernow has been ably seconded by the lumbermen of the South, so that a most complete exhibit of this nature will be made.

The display of the United States division of forestry is rounded out and made complete by a small but comprehensive exhibit of the naval store industry, in which new and old methods of turpentine charring are illustrated.

SPEARE RELEASED.

He Will Be Given a Trial on Friday Next.

The preliminary hearing in the case of Luther W. Speare, president of the New Alexandria Improvement Company, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses from Francis Hall, has been set for next Friday.

Speare gave bonds for his appearance in the sum of $500, and was released.

Lady Cyclist Hurt.

Mrs. T. J. Landgreen, of No. 210 D street northwest, while riding last evening, came into collision with an unknown wheelman near the corner of Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue. Both riders were thrown to the ground, and Mrs. Landgreen was painfully bruised on the face and body. She was taken to Gilman's drug store, but refused to receive medical attention.

Soldiers and Financiers.

The Washington Light Infantry and the Treasury Department teams are scheduled to play to-day at National Park. The "money-handlers" have a great find in Nichols, as he has proved himself to be a valuable acquisition in all the games which he has pitched. The "soldiers" are aspiring for championship honors, and should they win to-day and beat the Engineers afterward they would then be on equal terms with the champions of the first series, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing team. Then their two clubs would have to play three games to prove which one is to be the champions for 1895.

Truck Horses Ran Away.

While harnessing up to respond to an alarm of fire turned in from box 127 about 2 o'clock this morning, the horses belonging to Truck C got out of the truck house, and dashed madly down the street, preventing the truck from going out. The fire was a small blaze in the rear of King's palace, No. 810-812 Seventh street northwest, and was caused by a lighted cigar being thrown into a box of rubbish.

What Some English Cousins and Americans Are Saying.

MIKE DWYER CRITICISED

Opening of Parliament, Emperor William's Tour, the Afghan Prince's Snubbing, Croker and Dwyer's Plays and Some Smaller Shot, Make Up a Good Budget of Week's News.

(Special Cable Letter.)

London, Aug. 17.—The meeting of the new Parliament has opened a second brief London season. Many members of the House of Lords and members of the House of Commons have brought their wives and families to the city with them, and the shops are unwontedly busy for the month of August. The consensus of opinion is that the new Parliament contains much good society material, there being among the members of the House of Commons an abnormal number of young and wealthy men.

The speech of the Duke of Marlborough on Thursday in the House of Lords, in moving the address in reply to the Queen's speech, is regarded as very clever, and has won for the Duke complaisance from all parties. The London representative of the United Press declares that it is the Duke's intention to leave London for a visit to the United States in a course of a few weeks, taking with him only one servant. His object in making the visit is to see the country, for which he entertains a great admiration, which his stepmother, now Lady William Russell, encourages.

Despite the heavy rain storms which occurred during the entertainment of Emperor William of Germany by the Earl of Lonsdale, his majesty's visit was a decided success. On the 12th instant the Kaiser shot fifty brace of grouse. The Emperor greatly astonished his suite by appearing in an ordinary shooting suit instead of the theatrical attire that he wears on his hunting expeditions in Germany. This costume consisted of a braided tunic, high boots, and a Tyroler hat adorned with feathers. There, however, his majesty discarded on this occasion, having ordered from a London tailor a couple of hunting suits, grayish brown in color, and of a pattern similar to the Prince of Wales' shooting dress. The Kaiser, it is said, has decided to adopt this costume for hunting, and his example will be followed by a majority of his suite.

ENRAGED THE AFGHAN.

His Majesty, during his visit to England, gave grave offense to Nasrulla Khan, the Afghan prince, who has for some time past been in England, by failing to ask the prince to meet him, and by not sending him any message or letter. The position of the prince excites public curiosity. It is known that he has received an almost unlimited number of hints from the Queen to leave England, and that she has told him that he need not again visit any member of the royal family, and so Nasrulla never leaves the grounds of Dorchester house, where he is staying. The government of the country, also, while the prince is in England, and that she has told him that he need not again visit any member of the royal family, and so Nasrulla never leaves the grounds of Dorchester house, where he is staying. The government of the country, also, while the prince is in England, and that she has told him that he need not again visit any member of the royal family, and so Nasrulla never leaves the grounds of Dorchester house, where he is staying.

Turf circles are still indignant over the account of the interview with Mr. M. P. Dwyer, chief of the New York Times, and the member of the Tattersall's committee, to whom the called account of the interview was shown recently, said, after having conversed with a number of prominent persons in the paddock at Kempton Park: "CAN'T PLAY IT."

"The opinion here is that Messrs. Croker and Dwyer failed in thinking they could play the same game in this country as they play in America and use their money as a power to command other owners. There are too many big independent men here who understand racing thoroughly for such plans to succeed. The practice of putting horses worth $1,500 in the market for sale of which is to be sold at $200 is an old business. The Marquis of Hastings introduced it thirty years ago, and, plunging, made heavy winnings. Nowadays, however, the bookmakers keep a sharp lookout for such sales, and when they are discovered clamp their prices accordingly."

The member, when asked if Mr. Croker would make his English racing pay, said that was a different matter. Charles Mordaunt, who formerly trained Reginald Abingdon, and who is now in the navy, and Mr. Croker's employer, is a clever trainer and adviser, and may win a lot of money for his employer. Mr. Croker remains at Newmarket, where he passes his time in close attendance to his horses. He, however, makes frequent visits to Lowestoft, where his wife and other members of his family are spending the holidays. If he watches events in the political field of New York he does not give any sign of the fact. In the course of the interview with him on Friday Mr. Croker said in reply to a question in reference to the recent discussions among the New York police commissioners, that he had nothing to say upon the subject.

It is stated that the Duke of York is prepared to sell a valuable collection of postage stamps, which he wishes to dispose of as it stands, while Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, who has made the most liberal offer for the collection thus far received, wants to take only the rarest specimens. Several and the most valuable stamps in the collection are insured.

WILL PROBABLY REMAIN.

Vanity Fair says it is likely Sir Julian Paasche, British Ambassador to the United States, will be asked to succeed Sir Edward Malet as the representative of Great Britain at Berlin, and that if Sir Julian desires to remain in Washington, Sir Philip Currie, British Ambassador at Constantinople, will be named as Sir Edward's successor. The nomination of either of the diplomats mentioned would be generally satisfactory.

The question of the development of mines in British Columbia is at present attracting much attention in financial circles in the city, and it is probable that several mining experts will visit the province in the autumn. If the reports made by them of the results of their investigations shall be favorable a large influx of British capital may be expected.

During the Cowes regatta week one of the first yacht designers in the country was heard to say that he had never before seen such rubbishy racing, and that the regatta was a disgrace to the name of the English crew on board of her he would be willing to wager odds of 5 to 1 that she would prove to be ten minutes faster than any boat of her class in England.

SENT TO THE ASYLUM.

Mrs. Bittling Will Be Confined in St. Elizabeth's For the Present.

Mrs. Eleanor Bittling, the unfortunate woman whose mind became affected at the death of her husband, and who attempted to kill her two children, as published in The Times, was committed to St. Elizabeth's Asylum at 1 o'clock to-day.

An examination was held yesterday by the board of police surgeons, and they determined to take this step. Dr. Nevitt said to-day that he was convinced by the woman's ravings and irrational talk that she was a fit subject for an insane asylum, and he would have her taken there to-day. Later it is his intention to have a writ of lunatic quo inquare issued and a jury to decide as to her mental condition, but at the present time he thinks it is a wise move to have her committed to an asylum.
